DEEP SPACE™

Document Template Variable Dictionary

Every variable you can use in your own Word or HTML document templates, per document type — and whether Deep Space fills it today.

Updated 27 September 2026 · generated from the Deep Space variable register and checked against the code that fills each variable · 14 document types · 271 distinct variables (725 per-type entries)

How to use a variable

Type the variable anywhere in your template — a paragraph, a table cell, a header or a footer — written exactly as `${variable_name}`, including the underscores. When the document is generated it is replaced with the real value. A variable only works in the document type it is listed under.

Tables. Variables marked Table are whole tables Deep Space builds for you (e.g. `${progress_breakdown_html}`). Put them on a line of their own.

What the "Fills" column means

Fills	Meaning
Automatically	Filled from Company Settings, Project Settings, the record (PO, contract, claim, variation…) or built by Deep Space.
You type it when generating	The Generate dialog asks for it. Leave it out of the template if you don't want to be asked.
Word templates only	Filled in uploaded Word templates; not yet in templates edited in the Deep Space editor.
Not filled yet — known issue	Listed for completeness but nothing fills it today. Don't use it until this dictionary says otherwise.

Values print exactly as entered. Characters such as &, < and > in a company name, description or any other value appear in the document as typed, in both HTML and Word templates. A variable with no value prints nothing — never an example value.

Email templates use the same variable names. When you send a document, the Send dialog warns you — and won't send — if the chosen email template uses a name that nothing fills for that record (for example a typo such as `${compamny_name}`). `${pdf_download_link}` is filled with a link to the attached PDF.

Email-only variables. Payment schedule emails also use `${approver_email_row_html}`: the "Approved By" row, left empty while the schedule is still Draft.

> Company Settings matter. Company-sourced variables (licence, ABN, address, bank details…) print whatever is saved in Admin → Company Settings. Each document type checks the Company Settings values it prints before it is produced; if one is blank, Deep Space names it and nothing is produced or sent. Website, bank name, SWIFT, contractor licence and logo never block.

Acts cited. `${sopa_act_name}` names the Security of Payment Act for the contract's state (else your Company Settings state). `${statutory_declarations_act_name}` names the act a statutory declaration is made under in that same state, for example Oaths Act 1900 (NSW); the ACT uses the Statutory Declarations Act 1959 (Cth) and New Zealand the Oaths and Declarations Act 1957.

Proposal

31 variables · added 29 October 2026 · Preconstruction → Proposal Builder, when a proposal's output is set to one of your Word templates

Signatures. `${contractor_signature_html}` prints the signature drawn when the proposal is sent; `${client_signature_html}` prints the client's once they accept, so the signed PDF carries both. Put each on a line of its own, above the signature line. Before signing they print nothing. Signer names and dates fill the same way.

Client address and phone come from the client's entry in the Company Directory: the Address entered under Edit Company, and the primary contact's phone (else the phone on the client's Clients record). They print nothing when the proposal has no linked client or no value is entered.

Scope item rows. Put `${item.no}`, `${item.description}`, `${item.code}`, `${item.section}`, `${item.amount}` or `${item.breakdown}` in one table row and the row repeats once per scope item.
